A TERRIBLE HURRICANE. EARFUL DESTRUCTION ON LIFE AND

PROPERTY. HAMLET, N. C., Feb. 20. A cyclone passed over the Carolina Central railroad near Polkton last night, destroying everything in its way. Large trees, houses and fences were strewn in every direction. Its course was east, passing Lilseville eighteen miles up the Pee Dee river. At Rockingham, it struck a village on the outskirts of the town, destroying fifteen houses, killing in its course twentythree people and wounding many more It is reported that several colored people were killed on the Pee Dee -From Rockingham, it still pursued an easterly course, passing between Manly and Keyser, on the Raleigh & Augusta railroad, destroying everything

A party from Lillington, in Harnett county, says that it passed near there, killing six persons. It was at one time in four miles of Hamlet. Han accomhalf by two inches thick

CHARLOTTE, Feb. 20.

A storm accompanied by hail struck last night. The roofs of the bank and many stores were torn off. The Cataw. ba Oil Mill, Baptist and Presbyterian Churches and many private dwellings were wholly or partly destroyed .-Freight cars were blown from the track to the depot platform. The damage is estimated at $50,000. The sterm was very violent here and took the roof from Biddle's foundry.

THE STORM IN WAKE.

The wind in the course of the storm last night reached a velocity of sixty miles per hour. At Roger's X Roads the house of George n ebles was blown down. He was crushed to death; his aged mother was struck on the head by a beam and made blind; her life is de-

Near Cary every house on Mr. Sorrell's farm was blown down, and he was severely hurt, it is reported.

NEW ORLEANS, February 20. A special from Columbus, Miss., says: "A severe tornado passed through the lower portion of this county yesterday doing great damage to houses and dwellings. On some plantations not a single house was left standing. It is reported that one life was lost and many persons wounded."

MACON, GA., February 20. A heavy wind, rain and hail stcrm was reported from 8 to 5 o'clock last The wires are down in many places, making it dificult to obtain details. No loss of life is yet reported in this vicinity. Considerable damage has been done to fences, forests and buildings.

Report of Capt. Gabrielson. Capt. Eric Gabrielson, commanding the United States revenue steamer Dexter, has made a report to the Secretary of the Treasury in regard to the assistance rendered by that vessel to the wrecked steamer City of Columbus, off Gay's Head, on the 18th inst., full particulars of which have atready been published, including the gallant conduct of Lieut. Rhodes iu rescuing the two last bodies, which had been frozen to the rigging. The Dexter, with the assistance of the lifeboat from the shore, took from the wrecked steamer twenty-one persons, two of whom were dead when found, and two more of whom died after reaching the Dexter. Capt. Gabrielson says that the conduct of the officers and crew on this trying occasion was highly comtion of the department First Lieutenant W. D. Roath, Second Lieutenant J. W. Rhodes, and Third Lieutenant U. D. Kennedy, as brave and exemplary in their conduct on this occasion: also First Assistant Engineer A. F. Rockefeller and Second Assistant Engineer C. W. Beckwith, both of whom were assiduous in their care and attention to the survivors.

Meeting of the Union Veterans' Association.

Col. Mabson, in substance, said that the organization of the 25th Army Corps was a grand event in the history of the negro in the late war, as the order issued on the banks of the James river by our gallant Weitzel, will show. HEADO'RS, 25TH ARMY CORPS, ) ARMY OF THE JAMES. IN THE FIELD, VA., Feb. 20, 1865.

In view of the circumstances under which this Corps was raised and filled, the peculiar claims of its individual members upon the justice and fair deal ing of the prejudiced, and the regularity of the conduct of the troops, which deserve those equal rights that have been hitherto denied the majority, the Commanding General has been induced to adopt the Square as the distinctive badge of the 26th Army Corps. Wherever danger has been found and glory to be won, the heroes who have ought for immortality have been distinguished by some emblem to which every victory added a new lustre. They looked upou their badge with pride, for to it they had given its fame. In the homes of smiling peace, it recalled the days of courageous endurance and the hours of deadly strife-and it solaced the moment of death, for it was a symbol of a life of horoism and self denial. The poets still sing of the 'Templars' Cross," the "Crescent," of the Turk, the "Chalice" of the hunted Christian," and the "White Plume" of | man named Ferdinand Munoz, whose punied the storm and was two and a Murat, that crested the wave of valor, parents kept a small tobacco shop in sweeping resistlessly to victory.

Soldiers! To you is given a chance, in this Spring Campaign, of making this badge immortal. Let history record Chester, S. C., fifty miles south of here | that on the banks of the James, thirty thousand freemen, not only gained their own liberty, but shattered the prejudice of the world and gave to the land of their birth, Peace, Union and Glory. the fact that on the commencement of the war it was given out by some of the white soldiers of the Union that of the Georges.—Exchange. this was a white man's war and a white man's fight. But God moves in a mysterious way, His wonders to perform. God so ordered it that the white men could not preserve the Union, for, Mr. President and Comrades, you who read the papers and heard the whispers of those dark days, can well remember that the Confederate forces were holding their own about as well as the Federal forces were. Yes, sir, the Union army would gain ground one day and lose it the next. One army was about as victorious as the other. But let's see what caused a turn of the tide. I say, comrades, what caused the tide of victory to turn in the Union's favor? Was it not that the great minds of the north were forced, by the reverses they were meeting daily, to assemble in council and decide that they needed help? Whose help did they call for? Why they called for the help of the colored volunteers. But there was some doubt in the minds of the northern statesmen and army officers as to whether the negro would fight. Well, they tried mendable, each performing his duty with alacrity and efficiency, and he especially commends to the considerations. Now let's see whether he fought or not. What does our national cemeteries tell? Why are over 50,000 colored soldiers laying beneath the sod to-day? Why are their bones bleaching in the dust to night? For the privileges we are enjoying to-day. Civil rights, political rights, soldiers' and sailors' rights, and religous rights; and we propose to protect those rights. let come what will or may. Let weal or woe, let us survive or perish, we will maintain those rights.

Yes, we say that they did fight, and we are not the only ones that says so. What did the southern people say after the war was over? This is what they said, "If we had only armed the negroes we might have gained our independence and slavery would have existed in the southern states a hundred years longer." But I doubt this very much, for while we were slaves we were not fools. Let us see whether they fought or not. How was it at Petersburg, New Market Heights, Fort Harrison, Fair Oaks, Deep Bottom, Fort Pillow, where they were butchered after they surrendered. At Fort Sumpter where Sergeant Carney after being wounded draging his leg after him said, "Boys the old flag has has not touched the dust yet." How was it at Fort Fisher,

Freedom, we hear them cry, Freedom, or leave to die;
Freedom, or leave to die;
They meant that word,
Not as we do in party shout,
They willingly gave their spirits out.

CAPT. GEO. E. BERDEN,

Is Queen Victoria Mrs. Brown After all it would not be very strange if it should turn out that Queen Victoria was really married to the late John Brown. Widowed Queens are very much in the habit of doing that sort of thing. COALITION IN THE SOUTH Experience has demonstrated the power of coalition in the south. It i in this way more than any other that the issues and prejudices engendered between the sections by the war will be obliterated and put beyond the reach of possible future recall. Those who wish well for the country; those who are interested in its future prosperity, look to see the day that the memory of the war and its prejudices and bickerings will be at an end and these United States will stand united in sentiment and feeling as they are in name, in one harmonious union. To bring about this state of things should be the aim of every well wisher of the nation. The gradual allying with the Republican party of liberal men throughout the south will serve to weaken and eventually to break down the opposition to the Republican measures of peace and conciliation between the sections and bring about that condition of internal e which is so much to be hoped only obstacle in the way of epoch in our country's history is the southern Bourbons, and if that disturbing element was at rest, there would be internal peace. In the north there is found peace in the east there is peace, in west there is peace. It is reserved for the south to continue to be the section of turmoil, race disturbances, bulldozed elections, intimidation and bloodshed, and all this is the work of the southern bourbon. For almost a century he has waged a continual war against liberality, toleration, freedom and free suffrage. Continually apeing the manners of his ancestral party in France, claiming without any color of title either by descent or purchase superiority over his surrounding fellow-citizens. Waging the war of obstruction to every thought, idea and movement of a liberal or humane character, and keeping the southern section deprived of the capital, labor and enterprise so essential to its development. This is the result of the acts and prejudices of the southern bourbon. But the southern bourbon knows how to flee from the force of numbers; he likes his ease too much and his training has been such as to dcprive him of any desire for considerable effort to obtain any particular end. Hence it is he will flee before either strong enemies or work, and he can therefore best be silenced by the force of enemies and the gradual steady work of energetic opponents. There are thousands of men in the south who vote with him that do not believe in him, that have no heart or sympathy in his principles. Thousands that believe in a Der cracy that has its fundamental starting point in the established principle of an indissoluble union of states, but that have no stomach for the destructive freezing out policy of the southern bourbons. These belong in a coalition, and it is by coalition that their votes and sympathy can be secured for the national policy of the Republican party. The want of coalition leaves them with nowhere to go, and deprives them of concert and union, which weakens them and in many ipstances makes them half-hearted supporters of bourbon methods, simply for peace and security. These men should by coalition, and some concessions to their views, so far as the state is concerned, be secured for the general principles advocated and maintained by the Republican party. The result would be a weakening of the opposition to the Republican party in the south; would be a weakening of the bourbon strength; would cause a gradual wiping out of ideas, prejudices and feelings that deprive the south of a national character, and give it the sameness of the little manor or province of a Spanish grandee, would be a breaking down of the barriers of intolerance and proscription that shut the south out from compe-indicates the wisdom of preferring the As a Democratic party.

This is always the policy of those who try to palm off the spurious and seeking base upon the credulous.

The scheme of the sharper, the swindler and the counterfeiter is always to make his victim believe that the sham or the counterfeit offered him is essentially the same as the genuine article he desires. Satan is forever trying to delude his dupes into the belief that there is no real substantial difference between virtue and vice-between honor and dishonor.

But there is all the difference in the world between Republicanism and De mocracy. The lines of demarcation between them are deep and broad as a chasm. There is no excuse for any man putting them on the same level.

This need not refer to the principles advocated by either party. Professions of morality, decency, and elevated sentiments are just as cheap and easy for a party as for an individual, and count for as little when not accompanied by corresponding acts.

The Democratic party has rarely lacked a sufficiency of fine phrases and patriotic sentiments. Especially is this true when seeking votes. When confideut of its hold on power, however, it drops the tiresome mask of hypocrisy and reveals its sinister nature with brutal frankness.

Nor can the occasional nomination of a good man change the nature of the party. The best man in the Nation at the head of its ticket-tickets in every state and county in the country composed of exemplary men, -can no more altar its nature than the Ethiopian can change his skin or the leopard his spots.

The reason lies much deeper than a mere difference between two classes of men who look at questions from different points of view.

The two parties represent the workings of long years of the principle of natural selection in politics. Ever since its formation the Democratic party has drummed up its recruits among those who prefer hate and injustice to reason and humanity-who incline to dark ways and sinister methods rather than to open and honorable dealing; who resort to prejudice instead of thought; and who love trickery and cheating better than fairness and frank-

Establish a Good Reputation-A Growing Feeling. Hon. J. K. Tucker, of Virginia, is quoted as saying that there is a grow- follows any line of trade, or who lives ing feeling in Virginia for a high tariff by an occupation that brings him in and that it astonishes him. By "high" Mr. Tucker means a protective tariff. Mr Tucker might have remarked, also, that this growing feeling is not confined to Virginia, but exists in a majority of the southern states, where any progress has been made in manufactures, or where any attention has been given to them. This is a fact which no one will now gainsay. To attribute this growing feeling" to the teachings of protective newspapers, as some of the anti-protection journals do, is to greatly overrate the power of those paers and underrate the intelligence of the people. This growing feeling is not to be attributed to that altogether, while doubtless it has had its influence general information. But the people of the south, now embarked in new enterprises and looking to a grander changes. This is the only true thing it future, in a material sense, have seen the benefits other sections have derived from a protective tariff in the past, and in developing and enriching those sections, it may also be instrumental in building up our industries, and in de-veloping and enriching the south: As practical business men, from a business standpoint, discarding theories that have long since exploded, they pro-pose to enjoy some of the benefits that others enjoyed so long, and to whose enrichment the people of the south, when she had few manufactories of her own, contributed millions of dollars annually. Here is the secret of this growing feeling, noted by Mr. Tucker, and we don't see why he or any one else should find cause for 'astonishment" in it. It is simply a proof of the fact that level-headed, practical business sense is coming to the front, and that we who have been shaking the trees for others propose to have some of the fruit for ourselves.—Char-

We hear that the campaign in this tate is to be carried on after the plan of that in Virginia last year. It would be well for our people to post themselves as to what that was and what that means, before they allow themselves to be excited and deceived by the office husters. There was, peraps, never a more reckless, bitter and unscrupulous campaign of hulldozing and bribery carried on in any state than that by the bourbons in Virginia las. year, and its fruits have been damaging to the whole south. It was the spirit of revolution, of rule or ruinthe same spirit that characterized the secession leaders just before the late war-and the result to day is that the whole north and the right-thinking people of all sections are aroused and indignant at the violence and bloodshed which grew out of the campaign and disgraced Virginia. The blighting and evil fruits of this bitter campaign are to be seen in the fact that more than one-tenth of the great state of Virginia is not now represented in her state senate. Now in all seriousness, what is to be the outcome of such intolerance and bitterness? Can the bourbons hope to hold possession o the govrement of the south by such means? Will their bftterness not provoke resistance, retaliation, violence and bloodshed? Do they expect to preserve the peace and the good order cooked and gerryandered by the leg- of the country by such extremes? They must know that their extreme methods will not be long submitted to. Do they wish to provoke another war? That seems to be their purpose, rule or ruin, for they have adopted the same means to bring it about that was adopted by their predecessors just before the late horrible war. They cannot rule freemen by force, nor preserve the peace by violence. The sooner they learn this the better. It they persist in trying to get up another war, they will find that the masses of this country will not be led from their families and homes into the privations of army life, to fields of slaughter and bloody battles, because a few heartless adventurers wish to grow rich and enjoy the privilege of raling the people. Even if the people of the south are unable to free themselves from the clutches of these desperate men, the north will not longer tolerate a solid south made so by violence and politirency; that has bred Tweedism in New Hendersonville, and running it to cal persecution. Let the people check the fearful extremes in time. -Salis-

> Some few days since a Washington correspondent writing to some southern journal, said that every county in North Carolina was governed by officers appointed by the legislature. To this a bourbon paper in this state objects, and says the statement of the correspondent is a misrepresentation and calculated to mislead. How can this be so, when every man in this state knows that every county in North Carolina is governed by Democratic magistrates appointed by the legislature; praisers of property, levy the tax, ap-point registrars and inspectors of elec-tions and look after the matters of the county government that obtains in North Carolina is an outrage upon the people and a disgrace to the state.—

In the character of a person who daily contact with the business community, there is no trait that commends him more, nor quality that will secure him such good advantages in business as a disposition to be punctual in all his transactions. A man whose apprintment to meet you at noon is equivalent to a meeting at 12 o'clock sharp, or one whom you slways find waiting and ready to pay a bill promptly at the time agreed upon, not only wins respect and confidence, but challenges your admiration. Such men are sought after; their patronage is desirable; they are the men who will prosper, whose business will increase and it is they who will be the solid and influential men of a few years hence. We all know how annoying, troublesome and offensive it is to be repeatedly and coolly asked to "call to-morrow;" then it is "come again:" next it is "I'm too busy to day;" next it is "sorry, but we have a heavy payment to meet to day," and often, too, are all these excuses pleaded when the few dollars at stake could just as well as not be paid instantly and thus save debtor and creditor much valuable time, etc.

The man who has established a rep utation of having always paid his bil on first presentation of the same has a fortune in his good name and can ne-gotiate for credit more successfully than millionare who is close, unreliable in his promises to pay promptly.

Some men acquire a competence and speculations, but those who enjoy the greatest amount of public confidence and who are regarded as the best and safest men to deal with, are those who are mindful of the least obligations, and prompt in all things.

It is a subject that is worthy of careful consideration, and no one who wishes for even moderate success can afford to disregard the importance of punctuality. It is the life blood of a successful business career and a large per cent, of failures can be traced directly to neglect of this important tain Greiner, "that I came into posproves invariably that those who are punctual are most prosperous and contented, and have least occasion for every intelligent person to reflect. It appears that in the extradition treaty with Mexico, there is a clause providing that neither government shall be bound to deliver up its own citizens under the terms of the treaty. This clause has caused embarrassments to both governments, and very natu rally, since it must constantly happen that one or the other is required, in the one of the Ladon police courts on the plain interests or justice, to do the ground that he was a "Cosmist." thing which the treaty declares by implication shall not be done. Most of the trouble with Mexico grows out of frontier disputes and offences. There are and long have been a great many very bad characters belonging to both countries hovering about the border. These people make raids across the frontier either way, and out of these raids spring demands for extradition. Now it is certain that both the govern ments would be quite willing to give up their border ruffians for punishment by the country whose laws they have broken, and that such mutual extradition would have a wholesome influence in reforming frontier lawlessness. But the extradition treaty steps in and really has the effect of creating a sort of neutral territory where the worst thieves and murderders from both countries can not only live unmolestde, but cad establish a basis of operations against American and Mexican settlers and producers. It is obvious that this is a case for congressional action, and that if it is not altogether safe to withdraw the embarrassing provision in the treaty, some special provision of a sup plementary character should be inserted in the instrument, enabling the respective governments to further the cause of justice, and give some protection to the law abiding frontier inhabitants, by surreadering border criminals whenever satisfactory representations are made by the government requesting the extradition.

"Look here, Mr. Sheridan, I don't ee how you can give this saddle up. It seems to me that if one of my boys had played such a great part in the war, and had made such a famous ride on this saddle as Phil did no money would buy it of me,"

"Well, captain, I'll tell you how that is," said the old gentleman, quickly and proudly enough. "I did feel mighty proud and glad when I heard that my Phil was doing his duty so nobly. But I never cared about his promotions, nor about any of the fine stories or that poem about his ride. It would have hurt me terribly to have known that my boy had skulked or a few accumulate fortunes by daring played the coward, or shunned any duty, but it never mattered to me whether people lionized him or not, As for his old hats and clothes and swords and that old saddle, I don't care anything about them. Cosmism. A London letter to the Boston Adver tiser has this: A few weeks ago a man refused to take an oath as a witness in hardseen a programme of this latest of the religious and semi-religious bodies that are so numerous in this country, and I reproduce its principal points for the benefit of any who are seeking for a new religion. The motto of the Cosmists is, "Deeds, not creeds;" the prin ciple, the service of humanity is the supreme duty. The design of Cosmism is to join all men and women into one family, in which the principle of equality, together with that of brotherly love (that is, love of the human race) is the predominate one, and the moral and material welfare of all the sole aim and purpose." The Cosmists are enjoined to act as follows: To give one another encouragement and aid, both material and moral To cultivate all their faculties. To contemplate all makind as brethren. To be courteous and forbearing to each and all. To practice charity without publicity or ostentation. There is nothing very new in these ideas, but they show how dissatisfied many are with our existing civili zation; and as such they may be recorded as among a curious phenomena of curious age

WILMINGTON, N. C. FRIDAY MORNING, FEB. 22, 1884.

The Louisana State Lottery Company.

"The principal actor in all the proceedings has been Charles T. Howard, an old lottery man, who was about 20 years ago the agent in New Orleans of the Kentucky Lottery people. The firm employing him was that of G. H. & Co. They thought they saw a better outlook in Louisana, and sought to improve the opportunity. In 1866 the proposition was made to apply to the Louisana Legislature for a lottery grant, and Murray's firm began its work. The outcome was rather slower than might have been expected, and the scheme did not get leval sanction until two years later. The legislature more than nine months before the adopmet in the summer of 1868. Howard telegraphed to Murray & Co., asking Howard's work was of a peculiar kind. The Legislature of the state consists of two houses, as is customary. The lower house was secured by the simple process of making a tally and paying a sufficient number of legislators at the rate of $100 per head. Among the members of the upper house, or Senate, of the state $50,000 of the lottery stock was distributed. The measure was passed by the Legislature and became a law, although without the approval of Gov. Warmoth.

Having succeeded so well, Howard went in for a stroke of business on his own account, and aimed at controlling and working the lottery scheme for himself and a few of his associates only. He took with him C. H. Murray, Z. E. Simmons, and John, A. Morris. Some of his other partners in the scheme were "frezen out," and others managed to get a little slice only by threats of legal proceedings. The lottery company was by the law obliged to have $100,000 subscribed and paid up before beginning its nefarious business. The money was not forthcoming, however, and the concern again resorted to a subterfuge. Murray brought down to New Orleans a check for the amount, and handed it to Howard in December, 1868. The check was immediately returned to the giver, who took it back with him. It was never used and never collected, as record8 still extant show.

Without waiting for even this pretended compliance with the law, the concern assumed to organize on Aug. 26, 1868. Howard and his, partners made themselves respectively President and Directors of the company and immediately contracted with themselves to run the business for 50 per cent. of the profitt. The other 50 per cent: were to go to the stockholders. Their way of making stockholders was rather unique, They made the capital $1,000, 000. Of this. $500,000 of stock was di vided equally among Howard, Murray, Simmons, and Morris. The remaining $500,000 was divided among the corporators, Howard and Murray taking a second slice in that capacity. The business of bleeding the community was begun in January, 1869, and has continued uninterruptedly ever since. Legislative and other bribery has been resorted to from time to time to avert any intermeddling, and, in 1877, when the Kellogg and Nicholls I egislatures were warring for the supremacy, the lottery campany entered the breach by paying the members of the former and enabling the latter to continue.

The year 1879 brought about the first setback to the company. The Legislature, stung to the quick by the prevailing corruption and demoralization, passed an act in March of that year abolishing the lottery company and making it a penal offense to sell its tickets. The act wiped the company out of any legal existence it had ever had. Thenceforward it was completely dissolved, and all the powers it could claim under the charter of 1868 were demolished. Too much money, however, was involved, and the lottery managers, no longer with a legal incorporation, tried to save their privileges. Pretending not to have been wiped out, and alleging an unwillingness to die, the old officers of the corporation brought suit in their own names against the state officers, alleging that the charter of the company was a contract which could not be broken. The suit was brought simply as a pretext, and was never pushed to a conclusion. It was an action by Howard and Morris, in the nature of a bill of equity, and was begun in the United States Circuit Court, Judge Billings presiding. This precious bill was filed on April 1, 1879. Issue was never joined in it, no answer was ever put in, and after serving its purpose the case was quietly discontinued on Nov. 1, 1880. In the meantime, however, soon after the proceeding was begun, a tempo.ary injunction was obtained, during the pendency of the suit merely. The merits and the facts of the case were never tried. A convention was held in the summer of 1879 for the pupose of drafting a new constitution for the state of Louisana. A constitution was drafted denouncing the vice of among other things. The agents of the Louisana Lottery Company were on the floor of the convention, and strove to accomplish by a constitutional enact-ment what they had lost by the action of the Legislature. The decision of Judge Billings granting a temporary injunction was something new and not understood. The lottery managers falsely stated that the Federal court had decided the repealing act of 1879 to be unconstitutional, and had held the charter of 1868 to be a valid and binding contract on the state. Acting on this misstatement, the Constitutional

Jonvention inserted a provision giving the General Assembly of the state a general authority to grant lottery charters, provided each charter was paid for at the rate of $40,000 per year, and

"The $40,000 per annum now provided by law to be paid by the Louisiana State Lottery Company, according to the provision of its charters granted in the year 1876, shall belong to the Charity Hospital of New Orleans and the charter of said company is recog-nized as a contract binding on said state for the period therein specified, except its monopoly clause," &c.

This blunder, which the convention was swindled into making, crept in when the constitution was adopted in December, 1879, although in the meantime, the supreme court of the United States decided in a similar case from Mississippi that a law like the revoking one of 1879 was a constitutional, and that consequently Judge Billings was in error in granting his preliminary injunction. Even without this decision, however, the lottery company had no existence and could not be given one by constitutional clause. It was dead tion of the new constitution, and that instrument could not give it life. This for funds so that he could procure the provision in the said constitution degrant He was sent nearly $50 000. claring that the repeal of a repealing act did not revive the former law unless that was expressly re-enacted in terms. No one of the state officers or local prosecutors here has yet dared to take advantage of the fact to proceed against the company.-Agents Herald.

MERICAN AND IMPOR

The extracts from the Queen's Diary that have been printed give a very erroneous idea of that royal production. Instead of being dull and commonplace, it is of the most absorbing interest. It is true that the lamented "gilnobility, some Scotch clergymen and doctors, and a miscellaneous, nondescript crowd, who go to make up what faithfully and graphically photographed. What, for instance, can be more touching and pathetic than this little entry under the date of Jan. 1?

"When Beatrice entered my room this morning pefore going down to breakfast she rushed into my arms and wished me "a happy New Year.' I rearranged my collar which the sweet child had rumpled, and, as I was about to kiss her was horrified to see that she interesting .- Raleigh Visitor. had a red pimple on end the of her nose about the size of a small garnet. I asked her how it had come there, but she could give to explanation. I then rang for Brown, who is my strong support in such afflictions, and requested his opinion. He put on his glasses, examined it carefully for nearly ten minutes and finally broke the suspense with the remark that it was a "braw" boil. This gave me ever so much relief and sweet Beatrice also, who was evidently alarmed and feared that she would have to use her pocket handkerchief perpetually during the balance of her life in order to hide it. Brown declared that he knew all about boils, and assured me that they were not dangerous when properly drawn. My first thought was to call out the Life Guards; but Brown assured me that it sufficient to drive it away. What should I do without Brown? * * * Brown has just brought in the poultice and is fastening it on the nose of Beatrice,

On January 10 the Queen writes:-"Brown wore a new suit of Scotch clother to-day, and looked really fine. His feet, which were unusually large when he first entered my service, appear to have become three or four sizes cream. I hope he does not take it from my toilet-case, for much as I like him,

"February 4 - My heart bled to-day shaving. Had it not been for the presence of mind of Brown, who, fortunately, applied some sticking plaster and staunched the wound, he might have lost several gallons of royal blood, which would, of course, have been a great loss and detriment to the Empire.

"February 20 .- Lorne came to the castle to-day. He seems to be a nice like him. He says he is entirely 'too fresh.' Wonder what he means? I must ask Brown, who knows as much as all my ministers put together.

"March 4.-Dear Louise tells me that Lorne has proposed and that she has accepted, knowing that I would approve. Brown, whom I have consulted on the subject, says that we shall have to board him at the castle if Louise and he are married. That, of course, is out of the question. I have enough to do now to make both ends meet at the end of the month and lay aside a trifle for a stormy day, My dear subjects are rich and they will have to support them. They will, I am certain, be glad to show their devotion and loyalty in this way. Louise, by the way, paints; but I am afraid she could not make much in that way.

The country must take care of them. "April 10.-Brown drinks a good deal of what he calls 'toddy' lately. He is even more amusing when he has indulged a little than when he is entirely sober. He insisted upon dancing a hornpipe in my presence last night. He brought in a wineglassful for me. How thoughfu! He wore his picturesque Highland costume and his lower limbs looked very beautiful.

"May 15.- My dear Beaconsfield becomes more charming every day. How fortunate I am in having so loyal a minister! In the course of conversation to-day he characterized Gladstone as an old donkey. That is my own private opinion. I hope the Tories will

SENSIBLE MEN and Women know ere diseases and derangements of the body each has a separate cause or origin, and that each needs a different method of treatment in order to effect a cure, and a moment's reflection must convince that any of the quack nestrums feisted upon the public claiming to cure all of a number of diametricly different diseases must prove failures, even if we do not call them humburgs.

POOR PEOPLE and people of moderate well to do or wealthy find that the enormous charges of practising physicians are a serious burden to them, and also flud that after paying themselves poor that no benefit has accrued to them, that in fact they have thrown their money away. To overcome these evils we offer Wheeler's No. 96 Sure Remedies to the sick and suffering one Remedy for each disease, without for a more remedy for each disease, without for a more remedy for each disease, without for a more remediation. Sure Remedies to the sick and suffering one Remedy for each disease, without for a moment claiming that one remedy will cure any other disease than the one claimed for it, and as these remedies have stood the test of years without a single failure we agree to refund the money paid in every instance where a cure is not positively effected. The remedies are entirely vegetable, can do no harm, and will positively cure every disease for which they are prescribed.

Cout, Lameness of Neuralgia are relieved at once and positively cured by the use of Wheeler's No. 96 Rheumatic Remedy. We say boldly that in the worst of cases of no matter how long standing, how serious or how painful, we can not only give relief but positively cure for all time. Failing to do this we will positively refund the money paid for the treatment, and if your sufferings are not positively stopped for all time you have not thrown your money away as you would on any other than these gnaranteed remedies. The price of Wheeler's No. 96 Rheumatic Remedy is only 50 cents, obtainable from druggists or sent free by mail on receipt of price. Stairps taken.

nature with a pretty face, beautiful figure, faultiess complexion, as well as the sweet-est of tempers and faultiess mental qualities grows prematurely old, gray and wrin-kled, her form loses its perfect contour, the kied, her form loses its perfect contour, the complexion becomes sallow, the brightness leaves the eye, a feeling of languor takes the place of the ence buoyant spirits, an irritable nervous fractiousness makes life a burden, things that once were trifles worry her till life becomes unbearable. All this being caused by the physical derangements so common to women, which the inmate modesty of feminine nature prevents their making knewn, and of which theignorance of the medical profession prevents a cure. Lady Reader, pause and consider, 'tis a duty you owe yourself, your family and your God, that you should cure yourself of these troubles add once more feel the glow of perfect health and spirits that nature intended for you. Wheeler's No. 96 Prescliptions are pleasant and palatable to take, contain nothing of an injurious nature, and contain nothing of an injurious nature, and may be taken by all ages at all times and in all conditions without possibility of ill effects, and will positively cure ony of the peculiar diseases to which females are subeffects, and will positively cure any of the peculiar diseases to which females are subject. Failing to produce a perfect cure the proprietors will refund the money paid for the treatment. If you have a sallow complexion, constant or intermittant headaches, backaches restlessness, loss of appetite, suppressions of monthly flow, or inregularities thereof accompanied by headaches, nervousness, hysic les and similar symptoms, Wheeler's No. 69 Prescription "B" will positively restore you to health. If you have a sensation of heat and throbbing in the back, frequent fainting spells, Leucorrhea or white discharge, painful or scalding sensation in urinating, reddish or white deposit in urine, hot and dry skin, Wheeler's No. 96 Prescriptions "B" and 'C' are 50 cents each, obtainable from druggists or sent by mail secure from observation post paid on receipt of price.
